FROM GRAND CENTRAL STATION VIA METRO NORTH

Take a Metro North Harlem Line train from Grand Central Station to White Plains.

White Plains can be an express stop (about 30 minutes from Grand Central Station). Complete train schedule information can be found on www.mta.info.

The Conservatory is within walking distance from the White Plains train station (if this is your first visit, take a local White Plains taxi directly to the Conservatory: it should cost less than $10 and take about 5 minutes). If you want to walk—stay on the platform and walk north (the direction of the train) until you get to a stairway that leads to the Mott Street tunnel under the tracks. At the bottom of the stairs turn left and walk out of the tunnel. You will follow a park-like path to the right to a commuter parking lot. Walk across the parking lot toward the County Center Building (a large, white, art deco looking building) to the intersection of Tarrytown Rd. (Route 119) and Central Ave. (Route 100).

Cross the street at the light—you will see City Limits Diner on the corner. The Conservatory is on the right just after the Diner. It has a purple awning and wide front stairs. This walk should take about 10 minutes.
